THE DAILY PROGRESS.

VOL. V. RALEIGH FRIDAY SEPT 23 1864 NO. 166.

TWELVE CENTS, THE PRICE WHEREVER IT GOES.

BY CHARLES BARRAY.

Old Tubal Cain was a man of might,
In the days when earth was young;
By the red forge light his eyes glowed bright,
As the hot sparks flew forth and sprung;
And his hammer it rang both loud and long,
All the while that the bellows blew;
And the burden still of his cheery song
Was the manner the good old armor-smith drew.

Old Tubal Cain was every inch
A master of his trade;
And the quantity of spears and shields
And helmets he made,
Was a matter of marvel to all the land,
For people said with one accord,
They'd never seen such a wonderful hand
As the hand of old Tubal Cain.

And the sons of Tubal Cain were apt
To follow their father's trade,
And each was a man that a sword could make
That would keep its steel blade;
They could forge a helm or a harness suit,
And carve out a shield so fair,
That lords would seek them the country through,
And fair ladies with gold and hair.

But Tubal Cain was the best of all,
He could work with hammer and tongs,
And he said "Alike I work for great and small,
For the humble as for the lords;
So this skill of mine I have special joy
To show forth in every line,
To make my fellows of use and aid,
And to comfort the needy and pine."

And he thought of the days that were to be,
When spears should be pruning hooks,
When every valley should laugh and sing,
And all the mountains and crags should ring
With the joyful song of the times,
And the voice of the people be lifted on high
For the coming of happier times.

And so Tubal Cain, in his good old age,
Passed down to the silent land,
But the sound of his hammer and anvil and forge
Still lingered on every hand;
And the old "Alike I work for great and small,"
Was remembered by all the throng,
And the spirit that wrought for the common weal
Was the spirit that conquered long.

The Governorship.

We think that Gov. Vance's cup of luck is about out, and that when he shall have served out his second term as Governor he will almost have done with office. It is well known that he had his eye on Hon. Dortch's place, and that the two parties had already received their instructions and encamped operations; but contrary to all expectations those who were but recently so obedient to his nod to kick up and grumble. This is sorely and ungrateful in them, and yet it is so.

We would suggest to them that they are all compromise by crossbreeding of our choice, Hon. [illegible].

The Salisbury Watchman gives Vance's reply, which we add showing, as follows:

"Some of the newspapers are discussing the question of Governor Vance becoming a candidate for Senator. We hope he has no wish to [illegible] Governorship. Democratic [illegible] Democrats, can scarcely be expected Gov. Vance [illegible] to his defeat by Mr. S. [illegible] They would not vote for him against any other man in the State. They wanted him to be Governor, and because he was Governor. Many [illegible] have left us on account of the [illegible] to the [illegible] opposed changing [illegible] resolutions of the recent conference declarations of the people. With personal regard to Gov. Vance we are opposed to electing Gov. Vance Senator.

We call attention to an article to be found in this issue, extract from the Petersburg Express, entitled "Our Great National Sin," from which it will be seen that the Printing of the Editor of that paper on the subject of speculation and extortion is very much after the style of our own. Avarice and Extortion are indeed our National Sins, and unless our people repent them of the evil and pursue a different course, how can they expect Heaven to bless our cause and country. Nearly the whole people seem to have been carried away by the passion for wealth, and the contagion is rapidly spreading. We all know that the exceptions are but very few.

Cure Sugar.—An exchange desires that those who have sugar cane fully equal to the same weight of good hay. Prepare them by cutting the stems of half ripe cane in pieces, and place in a tub. Dissolve in one gallon of boiling water one pound of salt to every 100 pounds of cane. Pour the water while boiling over the cane, cover the tub with a blanket; the steam soaks and assists the water; add a little more water and heat in the same.

No papers were received from Petersburg or Richmond yesterday.

OUR GREAT NATIONAL SIN.
